6.0 PROCEDURE

It is the policy of the Department of Public Safety that any former commissioned New Mexico State Police officer seeking reinstatement must meet and understand the following minimum criteria before being considered for reinstatement by the chief:

STATE POLICE REINSTATEMENT

- A. No applicant shall be eligible for reinstatement through the provisions of this policy if he/she:
1. Was previously removed from office or terminated by the DPS, State Police Division.
 2. Resigned pending termination proceedings.
 3. Resigned pending disciplinary proceedings, not including termination.
 4. Resigned pending any criminal or administrative investigation which could have resulted in disciplinary action.
 5. Resigned before allegations of misconduct are reported to the department or before the department can initiate an investigation which the employee knew of, or should have known was forthcoming.
- B. In the event an employee is terminated for failure to meet the educational requirements established by state law, such employee will only become eligible for reinstatement when he/she can demonstrate compliance.
- C. Each applicant must comply with all legislative and regulatory New Mexico Peace Officer certification/qualification requirements at the time of application, including any additional requirements set forth by the Department of Public Safety, New Mexico State Police Division. Applicants must possess a current and active Peace Officer certification from the New Mexico Law Enforcement Academy prior to making application.
1. All applications for reinstatement must be made on a prescribed form to the State Police Training and Recruiting Bureau. The State Police Training and Recruiting Bureau will be responsible for developing and disseminating any required forms, accepting applications, screening, processing and tracking applicants, making recommendations to the chief on eligibility of applicants, and record keeping.
 2. If the applicant has been employed by another police agency during separation, all certificates of training obtained with the other agency, are to be submitted with the application for reinstatement.
 3. The applicant shall submit any other information as required by the Department of Public Safety, New Mexico State Police Division.
- D. The applicant must submit to a complete background investigation as determined by the Department of Public Safety, New Mexico State Police Division, for the purpose of determining the moral character, general reputation, and fitness of the applicant. The chief, at his discretion, may authorize a partial background investigation depending on the candidate's length of separation from the department or his/her continuous service in law enforcement since separating from the department.
- E. The applicant must successfully complete psychological and physical examinations and agility tests administered by individuals designated by the Department of Public Safety, New Mexico State Police Division. The costs of said examinations and tests will be borne by the Department of Public Safety, New Mexico State Police Division. The chief, at his discretion, may waive this requirement depending on the candidate's length of separation from the department or his/her continuous service in law enforcement since separating from the department.

STATE POLICE REINSTATEMENT

- F. The applicant must have satisfactorily performed the duties of a New Mexico State Police officer prior to his/her separation from the State Police Division. The chief of the state police has sole discretion on determining whether an applicant satisfactorily performed his/her duties prior to separation.
1. It is the policy of the Department of Public Safety that any former New Mexico State Police officer who is reinstated must adhere to the following guidelines.
 - a. A one-year probationary period must be served following reinstatement in addition to completing any balance remaining of the initial two-year probationary period (including any extension) required to be served after recruit school.
 - b. Salary and benefits will be established according to policy.
 - c. A reinstated officer will be eligible for promotion to sergeant after five satisfactory years of service with the New Mexico State Police Division, three years of which must be post-reinstatement. However, all years of service prior to reinstatement will be computed in determining seniority for promotional purposes.
- G. An applicant eligible for reinstatement under this policy may be reinstated by the chief of the state police, solely at his/her discretion. No applicant for reinstatement has any right, conferred by this policy, or otherwise, to reinstatement. The state police chief's discretionary determination regarding reinstatement is not reviewable or subject to appeal, and is considered final.
